

BIOGRAPHY

Steve Elliott
Editor, News Leader
Fort Sam Houston Public Affairs Office

Steve Elliott entered civil service in November 2009 as a writer/editor at the Fort Sam Houston Public Affairs. Elliott writes and edits submissions for the Fort Sam Houston News Leader, as well as acting as a photographer.

Prior to entering his current position, Elliott worked for three years as an editor for four community newspapers at PrimeTime Newspapers, a division of the San Antonio Express-News, the publisher of the Fort Sam Houston News Leader.

Elliott also spent two-and-one-half years as public relations manager for two non-profit organizations: the San Antonio Food Bank and the American Payroll Association.

He retired from an active duty Air Force career of 21 years in January 2004, his last position as NCOIC of the 59th Medical Wing Public Affairs Office at Lackland Air Force Base, Texas.

Elliott has held virtually every position in Air Force public affairs from reporter to sportswriter, editor to public affairs, and NCOIC to chief of public affairs with assignments that included the U.S. Air Force Academy, Air Weather Service and several major tactical fighter wings throughout Europe, the Middle and Far East and in the United States.
