DI ENVIRONMENTAL IS ON THE JOB

FEATURE/JESSICA DAMBRUCH

Residents of U.S. Army Garrison-Kwajalein Atoll live close to the indigenous corals, sponges, plants and animals that make the Republic of the Marshall Islands their home. When it comes to protecting the environment from the daily impact of human activity, DynCorp International Environmental is proactive and on the job.

DI Environmental is comprised of a team of six specialists with backgrounds in engineering, environmental sampling and biology who locally administer the USAKA Environmental Standards (UES) program. Developed as a requirement in the 1986 U.S.-RMI Compact of Free Association, the UES provides the standards and requirements of U.S. Army activity within its sovereign host nation and requires U.S. activities in the RMI to be reviewed in accordance with the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA).

Additionally, the UES identifies specific activities that require a Document of Environmental Protection (DEP). These are essentially permits. When developed, the DEPs are required to undergo a public review prior to approval by the governing agencies. There are currently 13 DEPs that are administered at USAG-KA.

The five governing agencies for the UES include: the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (Region IX); the National Marine Fisheries Service (Hawaii); the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service; the Republic of the Marshall Islands Environmental Protection Authority (RMIEPA); and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

"Every U.S. activity [here] is looked at and evaluated to see what kind of environmental impact it could cause and what conditions must be in place to minimize possible impact on the environment," said DI Environmental Manager Gus Aljure.

"We ensure that there is compliance with those standards," he said. "If you're going to do any activities like dredging, filling or removing sediment from the water to build a new pier, you need to have certain permits. Those DEPs include controls, monitoring and sampling requirements, inspections, reports and notifications in case something goes wrong."

The team's duties include monitoring the quality of drinking water and the reclaimed water system used for non-potable water. Solid waste management and disposals at the landfills also require the team's attention.

Aljure explained that these aren't simple jobs. Each operation in the atoll has its own set of procedures that require the DI Environmental team to intuit future impacts before a project begins—essentially, forecasting and protecting the future of the natural world.

"We [also] get involved to ensure those aspects of the permits are being covered and addressed," said Aljure. This responsibility requires DI Environmental to make frequent visits to different facilities (including the outer islands) to evaluate compliance with the UES and the associated DEPs.

Examples of environmental activities in the atoll include: the project to transplant coral from Echo Pier in preparation for the renovation project; collecting groundwater samples for analysis from the landfill areas on Kwajalein, Roi-Namur and Meck; conducting facility inspections for management of hazardous materials and waste; and also issuing various vegetation removal permits for operational or safety purposes.

DI Environmental also supports community education through outreach projects. In addition to the weekly E-wareness topics published and posted in the Kwajalein Hourglass and on the AFN Roller, an annual ocean-side Kwajalein Earth Day Clean-Up event promotes recycling awareness and informs island residents about the dangers of aquatic pollution, including plastics.

Aljure recommends residents obtain required permits, follow rules and regulations and enjoy the natural world from a safe distance.

"The key thing is all coral, sponges and many species of fish are protected," said Aljure. "When people go diving, it's easy to grab on to coral and not realize the detrimental impact it can have. It's better to keep a hands-off perspective. We all want to be good stewards of the environment."

YUK WOMEN'S CLUB WELCOMES NEW EXECUTIVE BOARD

NEWS/JESSICA DAMBRUCH

The Yokwe Yuk Women's Club convened for its first annual Pass the Binder ceremony Wednesday, May 16 at the quarters of U.S. Army Garrison Kwajalein-Atoll Commander Col. James DeOre and Debbie DeOre.

After a brief reception, the group of more than 15 female leaders and professionals witnessed the presentation of official club records and events information by the outgoing board to the new executive board officers for 2018.

"Debbie [DeOre] and April [Shirley] wanted a way to show their appreciation for the current board and all they've done this year," said outgoing YYWC President Mindy Cantrell. "I wanted to show the new girls on the board that this was a special group they were joining."

The YYWC is open to all adult Kwaj ladies. Annual community events sponsored by YYWC like the Kaleidoscope of Music and the YYWC Basket Auction raise funds for Kwajalein High School senior scholarships and education grants for student supplies and schools in the Republic of the Marshall Islands and the Federated States of Micronesia.

Before they adjourned, the outgoing YYWC board exchanged tokens of appreciation and thanked everyone gathered for their volunteerism.

Each member also received a decal by Jac Crooker sporting the organization's slogan: a pink heart framed by wings and a splash of writing.

"It says Pass the Love," said Cantrell. "YYWC is all about the ladies and children on Kwajalein and all the children in the Marshall Islands and Micronesia."

KWAJ COMMUNITY SPOTLIGHT

HOURLASS REPORT

Any USAG-KA resident who would like to adopt a dog or cat on island should check in with Barbara Kocis.

Kwajalein's vet tech hails from Stafford, Virginia and came to the island in November 2017 with a wealth of emergency room medical experience. She is pleased to assist the island's more than 300 total cats and dogs with routine medical check-ups and has a few words of wisdom for Kwajalein's pet owners.

"Cats and dogs can get dehydrated too," said Kocis in a recent interview. "Cats on island should stay inside, out of the sun. They can become dehydrated very easily."

Kocis recommends wet food for cats to assist with proper hydration in Kwaj's hot climate and encourages pet owners to always have fresh water available for the island's four-legged residents to keep them healthy and safe.

BEAUTIFUL MOVES

WITH FMWR HEALTH AND FITNESS

PROFILE / JESSICA DAMBRUCH

U.S. Army Garrison-Kwajalein Atoll Family & Morale, Welfare and Recreation Health and Fitness programming now includes creative cardio courses taught by Allena Childress, the island's newest instructor.

Childress arrived on island in the early spring with a passion for dance and a plan to make fitness fun. Her Zumba classes are packed with happy Kwaj residents who kick fitness into high gear.

"Enjoying motion and movement is a passion thing," said Childress. "Motion is beautiful. When you dance you feel better and more powerful in your own skin."

The instructor brings more than 15 years' dance instruction experience to the island community. She also designed and performed dance routines with a professional troupe in Japan.

On Kwajalein, Childress aims for her students to enjoy their journey to good health in group workout. Don't be surprised if you hear a few of your favorite songs in the middle of an Aqua Aerobics or Zumba class.

"I find music helps all different kinds of people get into fitness," said Childress.

Depending on the day's students, she may cue up rock and roll, 80s hits or techno to energize the afternoon.

Childress knows Zumba will appeal to experienced and novice cardio lovers alike. Picture action-packed sequences of lunges with low kicks and punches and all of your friends jamming out to a favorite hit song.

Better yet—try out a Zumba class and bring your friends.

"Zumba moves can be found in [a style called] Latin Heat," said Childress. "It incorporates all kinds of dance moves and styles."

The typical Zumba workout routine is less about high kicks and more about fun flow and energy with room for personalized expression.

"I always throw in some flair with my hands," Childress said. "I love to dance."

If dance isn't your forte, Childress just added kickboxing fitness courses to the FMWR Health and Fitness Schedule. The instructor invites everyone to pick a course to try out.

"Check out these classes and find one you like—they're fun," said Childress. "There is something here for everybody to try."
